VALUABLE INFORMATION AT YOUR FINGERTIPS

Information is valuable and in today's world it can be found in a variety of places. At Ford Meter Box, we work hard to make our product information available in as many places as we can. We want our customers to know about the features and proper use of our products, and in 2002 that means information is printed in catalog sections, is digitally available online, and is contained in or on product cartons.

Many customers rely on the Ford catalog for information, but we also have information available in many forms and in many places. One of the best sources of information can be accessed by a phone call to your Ford Distributor. This local presence is a source of experience and expertise that can be tapped quickly. Another source is the Ford sales staff. Our field sales representatives throughout the United States complement customer service managers at the factory.

The internet has become an excellent tool for making information available. The Ford web site has hundreds of pages describing our products. Also found on our web site are all of our installation instructions. The submittal area of fordmeterbox.com is our most visited site. The 940+ submittals are valuable tools for explaining the features of our products. The big advantage of online information is that it is current and is updated more often than printed material. We make daily changes online.

Lastly, one of the most important locations to find information about how to use Ford products is in the product carton. Our installation information is more than fill for the ditch. It is included with the product so that the installation of Ford products can be quick, easy, and safe.

If you need additional product information, please contact your local Ford distributor, The Ford Meter Box Company, or go to fordmeterbox.com.
